4 The Qualifications reqd. to an Ord Carpol. d.o. to the SS. (1993 of 22-8-27) does not exhaust all the Qualifications which would entitle one to allowances. It is merely illustrative. D.O.s in instance would go with D.O.s entitling one to Rs. 75.

Office of the Senior Surgeon, M.O.
Dated Bangalore, 29th August 1927

From

Senior Surgeon with the Government of

To

H. H. the Maharaja of Mysore, Bangalore

Sir

With reference to your D.O. letter No.G.1995-Med.1-27-1, dated 22/23d August 1927, laying down the scale of absorbable allowances to be granted to Assistant Surgeons returning with higher qualifications from Europe or America, I have the honour to state as follows.

2. An allowance of Rs.150 has been fixed in the case of an FRCS (Eng) against one of Rs.100 in the case of an MRCP (Lond). This disparity is not in accord with the estimation of the relative importance of these qualifications as accepted by the medical profession all over. Just as the FRCS is the highest distinction conferred by the College of Surgeons on the results of an examination, MRCP is the highest distinction awarded by the College of Physicians on the results of an examination. It is true that there is the Fellowship of the Royal College of Physicians. But this is obtained not through an examination but by election from among the members, on grounds of seniority, etc, on the occurrence of vacancies in the Order of Fellow Moreover, the Royal College of Physicians is a more ancient institution and is recognised on the Continent. I therefore strongly recommend that FRCS(Eng) and MRCP(Lond) may be placed on a par in respect of the allowance to be admissible to the holders thereof.

3. Among the qualifications signifying higher training in special branches of the Medical Profession, only two are mentioned, viz., D.O., and L.M. While these could be secured by a registered medical graduate after undergoing a minimum course of 9 or 6 months, respectively, in recognised institutions/preparing candidates for each of the diplomas, L.D.S. (in the dental branch), is a qualification which required not less than three years' study and hard apprenticeship on the part of the candidate and consequently deserves
